Sofia and Maddi live in the same neighborhood, play in the same park, and go to the same school. But while Sofia's fridge at home is full, Maddi's fridge is empty - white empty - with just a small container of milk.

“Why doesn't your mom go to the store?” Sofia asks.

“We don't have enough money.”

“But what if you get hungry.”

“We have some bread,” Maddi says

“Please don't tell anyone.”

Sofia promises Maddi she won't tell, but is determined to help her best friend. She sneaks food for Maddi in her bag and discovers that, while fish and eggs are good for kids, they aren't good for backpacks. Despite Sofia's very best efforts, Maddi's fridge is still empty.

Sofia promised not to tell. Now what can she do?
